

Fresenius Kabi delegation attend EAHP congress

The European Association of Hospital Pharmacists (EAHP) congress was held this year in Barcelona with over 3,750 delegates in attendance and 78 exhibitor stands.

This is the 24th year of the EAHP congress and, as expected, there were quite a number of exhibitors from all areas of the medical world with a very strong presence in biosimilars and medical devices.

As part of their Global Brand

Awareness campaign Fresenius Kabi, as a sponsor of the event, sponsored the registration lanyard which held entry passes to the exhibit.

Some of the discussions at the event featured talks on exploring the reasons for the variation in use of biosimilars amongst countries and show examples of how barriers to their use were overcome in many settings. The conclusion required a multifaceted approach to implementation

Harold Lewis, University Hospital Galway, Conor Sadlier, Fresenius Kabi Ireland, Tom Walsh, Merlin Park Hospital and Bernard Carr, St James's Hospital

"EAHP provided me with a great opportunity to network and gain insights into EHealth, robotics and high-risk medications. I was delighted with the opportunity to attend this conference once again" said Bernard Carr from St James's Hospital.

"I thoroughly enjoyed the conference. Especially the talks on the uptake of biosimilars in other markets. It is great to hear how pharmacists in other countries deal with similar challenges. The sessions on FMD and anticoagulation were also very informative" said Tom Walsh from Merlin Park Hospital

"I really enjoyed the conference this year. The exhibition hall and demonstrations on the robotic compounders were really interesting. It is great to also get an update on the uptake of biosimilars from other markets to see how we compare in Ireland. Thanks to Fresenius Kabi for my providing me with the opportunity to attend this year's EAHP conference", said Harold Lewis from University Hospital Galway.

Sales Manager Conor Sadlier said: "It was a pleasure to attend EAHP once again and represent Fresenius Kabi on the stand. There was a large attendance from Ireland this year in Barcelona and it is a great opportunity meet customers on the stand or at the Cyber Cafe area."

involving education, problem-solving, financial incentives as well as audit and feedback.

As part of the Irish delegation sales manager Conor Sadlier and sales representative Gavin Butler along with guests Tom Walsh, Merlin Park Hospital, Harold Lewis, University Hospital Galway, Bernard Carr, St James's Hospital attended. This gave delegates the opportunity to attend talks in relation to their respective interests.